I went out to Versailles this morning to distribute some furniture that had arrived from Reffold in London. The autumnal weather is beautiful.

During the afternoon we discharged Jim Clarke at the Gare des Invalides, whence she was going to London, and afterwards went around to have tea with Phyllis and Douglas, who are leaving tomorrow to meet Mendès-France in America.

Tonight the Teddy Whites, the Schoenbruns, Dorothy Schoenbrun's sister Miss Scher, and Preston Grover came to dinner. We had a lively evening, to which a small contribution was made by a couple of magnums of champagne and by Ch. Latour 1918, Ch. Pichon Longueville 1921, and Ch. Cheval Blanc 1929.
